Excerpt: . . . case against Limoges, made a serious error. In any case, on the night of the escapade and of the alleged offence, as well as at the time the information was laid, the child had not yet been convicted, so it is difficult to see what relevancy the conviction possessed except possibly under the words contributing and becoming as used in section 29 of the Act. The allegations in the affidavits that the first adjournment to the 24th of October was for the purpose of giving judgment are not contradicted and are indeed confirmed by the magistrates use of the words referring to what he did on the 29th--I open the case. It seems to be clear under the authorities that this is fatal to a conviction. My view of the proper interpretation of section 29, if it were necessary to express a definite opinion, would be that before a person can be guilty of an act contributing to a childs becoming a juvenile delinquent the child must in law and fact have become a juvenile delinquent. The Act does not use any words implying that an act which is of such a nature as to be likely to cause the child to become a delinquent, where the child is not shewn to have become such, is an act which is prohibited. One of the grounds given by the magistrate for holding that the child become a delinquent, viz: -- that of the violation of a...
