Excerpt: . . . the same principle that we in a wakeful state could look through said walls if they were thin, transparent glass. On this principle, if the subject be charged too much or too little, he cannot see clearly. Or if the night be rainy, or even damp, and unfavorable to electricity, then experiments in clairvoyance must fail, or be very imperfect. The subject must be magnetically charged exactly to that degree which will bring him into magnetic equilibrium with external electricity. Then, if the night be favorable, the experiments will most likely prove successful- For the sake 6f perspicuity, I will take another position. Why can you see through that window You answer, because the glass is transparent. But why is it transparent You again answer, because upon every square inch of its surface there are several thousand pores, and the glass is of that chemical...
