Reviews

The publication is simple in go through preferable to fully grasp. I am quite late in start reading this one, but better then never. It is extremely difficult to leave it before concluding, once you begin to read the book.

Excerpt: . . . due to the character of the changes in diet occurring during the course of the experiment. Thus, of the total average reduction of 135 grams of fresh foods per man per day from the fore to the test period, the greater part, 117 grams, was due to a reduction in the milk, cereals, potatoes, and puddings, which have a high ratio of phosphorus to nitrogen as compared with the meats, bread, soups, and vegetables, in which there was only very little if any reduction. The average ratio of phosphorus to nitrogen in the former class of foods is 125. 7, while in the latter it is 1: 13. 8. The group averages for the entire experiment were as follows: Group A, 129. 1, Group B, 129. 1, Group C, 129. 3, and Group D, 129. 5. The averages for the subgroups also showed close similarity, excepting those for Group B, the ratio for the subgroups in this case being 1: 91 and 1: 8. 8, respectively. It is thus apparent that on the average the members of the four groups were thruout the mfaxperiment quite similar as to the ratio of phosphorus to nitrogen in the ingested ood. The differences in the ratio of phosphorus to nitrogen in the foods of the individuals of the Club are traceable to the same causes as are the variations in this ratio from one experimental period to another. Thus, Subject 9 of Group A, showing the maximum...
